WEE READ

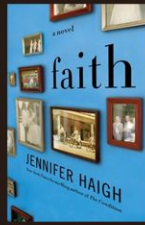

Reviews for the young and the young at heart. by Ann Darby

Me . . . Jane
By Patrick McDonnell

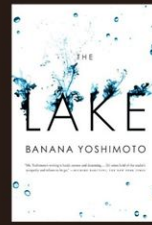

Author and illustrator, Patrick McDonnell is probably best known for his comic strip "Mutts." This environmentalist and animal welfare advocate is also a prolific author of children's books, dealing with such subjects as peace, nature and conservation. McDonnell's latest book is "Me . . . Jane," a special biography of scientist Dr. Jane Goodall. As a child Jane loved to spend time exploring the out of doors, and dreamed of making a career of that interest. After Jane finished school, with little money and the stigma that girls did not follow adventurous careers, she worked very hard and was finally able to journey to Africa in 1957 and begin her work. She did much on the study of chimpanzees and observed that they were able to make and use tools. Before her studies it was assumed that only humans were capable of this. Jane Goodall's work is an inspiration to us all.

NATIONALLY RENOWNED AUTHOR TO VISIT BAILEY

Nationally acclaimed wildlife writer Susan Hand Shetterly will appear at the Bailey Public Library on Tuesday, May 17, at 6:30 p.m.

Shetterly will speak about her latest book, "Settled in the Wild," a collection of distinctive and revelatory essays about her life spent in and along Maine's rugged woods and coasts. The book was chosen for the nationally respected Indie Next List in February 2010, and Publisher's Weekly called Shetterly's eye for poetic detail "exquisite."

The book explores accounts of how Shetterly lived alongside her husband and two young children without electricity in a cabin in Maine; her explorations with Chac, a raven she rehabilitated; fruitlessly shielding her goldfish from a vigilant kingfisher; discovering escaped farm-raised salmon trying to live in natural waters; and defending the land against inevitable development.

A former wild bird rehabilitator, Shetterly has written about wildlife and wild lands for more than 20 years. She is the author of the essay collection "The New Year's Owl," and several children's books. She was a contributing writer to Down East, Audubon Magazine, Yankee and Maine Times. Copies of the book will be available for sale at the event through Apple Valley Books.
